Getting there

Getting to Leipzig

by train

Leipzig is easily reachable by train from the rest of Germany and Europe. Search for trains to Leipzig's central train station (Leipzig Hauptbahnhof) on the website of Deutsche Bahn (<https://www.bahn.com/en/view/index.shtml>).

by plane

If you are flying to Leipzig, the closest airport is 'Leipzig/Halle'. There are trains that will take you to Leipzig's central train station (S5/S5X/IC2049) in 20-30min (about 5€). Taxis to Leipzig will cost about 40€. Alternatively, you could fly to Berlin-Schönefeld airport. There are trains and buses (ex. www.flixbus.com) going from Berlin to Leipzig regularly.

Getting to the research centre

The research centre is easily accessible from the Central train station by TRAM (3/3E direction Taucha (15min), or by cycle through the extensive network of cycling paths. Parking on campus may be restricted if there is a special event.

Accommodation

There are two hotels relatively near campus (10-15min walk): 'Suite Hotel Leipzig' and 'Hotel Adler Leipzig', but most are near the central train station / city centre. It is rather quiet near campus and even restaurants are limited.

Staying near the city centre would give you more options for dinner and entertainment in the evenings (ex. Christmas market). Online services like booking.com should give you a good overview of available rooms.

Other useful information

Trains, TRAM's and buses: validate your ticket just before hopping on TRAM's and buses: Google map does NOT have the information about lines and schedules, but there is an app 'easyGO'.

There is a bike rental service called nextbike that lets you pick up and drop off your bike almost anywhere in the city (including at Helmholtz UFZ) <https://www.nextbike.de/de/>

There is a reasonably priced canteen on campus for breakfast and lunch (including vegetarian options).
